

Firm Successfully Defends Family Medicine Doctor in Ozark

Fred W. Tyson and Ben C. Wilson successfully defended a family medicine physician in a medical malpractice/wrongful death case tried before the Honorable Thomas E. Head in the Circuit Court of Dale County, Alabama. The case involved the death of a patient who experienced a rupture of the ascending thoracic aorta approximately three days after being seen by the defendant physician. The plaintiff contended that the patient, who had a long-term history of high blood pressure and more recently back pain, was experiencing a dissection of the thoracic aorta at the time of the visit to the physician's office. The plaintiff further contended that the physician breached the standard of care by failing to address the patient's elevated blood pressure and failing to order tests that allegedly would have identified an aortic abnormality. These allegations were vigorously disputed by the defense, who maintained that the patient's blood pressure was properly evaluated and addressed and that no aortic abnormality was present at the time of the care in question. The defense, primarily through the testimony of the state medical examiner, further maintained that the patient subsequently experienced a sudden, catastrophic rupture of the aorta that could have neither been detected nor prevented by the defendant physician. After a five-day trial, the jury rendered a defense verdict following approximately ninety minutes of deliberation. The Plaintiff was represented by Joel Williams of Troy, Alabama and Yvonne Gabrielson of Dothan, Alabama. The case number is CV-2003-80 (Circuit Court of Dale County).

Firm Successfully Defends Hospital and Family Practitioner in Montgomery

William S. Haynes and L. Peyton Chapman, III successfully defended a hospital and family practitioner in a medical malpractice / wrongful death case which was tried before the Honorable Truman Hobbs in the Circuit Court of Montgomery County, Alabama. The case involved the death of a patient who was alleged to have aspirated Barium during an attempted upper GI study with small bowel follow through. The Plaintiff contended that the family practitioner breached the standard of care by ordering the upper GI study because the patient allegedly had a bowel obstruction which contraindicated the study. The Plaintiff further alleged that a radiology technologist employed by the defendant hospital failed to timely address the patient's deteriorating condition subsequent to the attempted upper GI. These allegations were vigorously disputed by the Defendants. During the five day trial of the case, a co-defendant radiology practice group was voluntarily dismissed by the Plaintiff, and the claims against the hospital were subsequently dismissed by way of a judgment as a matter of law which was granted by the Court at the close of the Plaintiff's evidence. The remaining case against the family practitioner defendant was resolved by way of a defense verdict which followed approximately ninety minutes of deliberations. The Plaintiff was represented by Rick Alvis, Esq., and Mary Leah Miller, Esq., of Alvis and Willingham, L.L.P., in Birmingham, Alabama.

RSJG Obtains Excellent Result for Termite Company

RSJG attorney Paul James recently represented an Alabama termite company in a case tried in the Montgomery County Circuit Court. Prior to the trial, the plaintiffs' final demand exceeded $150,000. At the end of a four-day trial, the jury returned a verdict for $15,000, an amount that was further reduced by an offset successfully plead by Mr. James over the objection of the plaintiffs.

The case arose out of the sale of a home to a Montgomery couple. Prior to the purchase, the defendant prepared an Alabama Wood Infestation Inspection Report, known in layman's terms as a "termite letter." The firm conducted an inspection of the home and found no visible evidence of active or previous termites. The technician prepared the termite letter and sent the letter to the realtor who placed a copy in the mortgage closing file, which the plaintiffs allegedly reviewed.

After closing on the home, the plaintiffs discovered termite damage in their home just outside the 90-day period outlined in the Alabama Wood Infestation Inspection Report. The plaintiffs initiated legal action against the termite company on claims of fraud, misrepresentation, suppression, breach of contract, breach of warranty, negligence, and wantonness.

At summary judgment, James successfully argued that all claims for suppression and breach of contract should be dismissed. The case tried on the remaining issues.

The plaintiffs argued throughout trial that some evidence of active or previous termites was visible at the time of the inspection because an insurance adjuster had identified termite damage three weeks prior to the termite company's inspection. The jury was told, and received documents supporting the plaintiffs' conclusions on this important issue. The plaintiffs contended that the short time period between the insurance adjuster's identification of termite damage and the preparation of the report made it clear that not only had the termite company and its technician intentionally defrauded the plaintiffs but it engaged in gross, wanton conduct that warranted the imposition of punitive damages. The plaintiffs asked for $150,000 in compensatory damages and an unspecified amount in punitive damages. After nearly a day of deliberations, the jury returned a verdict for $15,000, an amount that was reduced by a $3,500 settlement with a co-defendant. This amount was later to be reduced by a subrogation claim.

During post-trial proceedings, James successfully argued that the offset should apply to further reduce the amount owed by the termite company to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs did not challenge any further issues in the case.
